A very sweet romp through Europe by a group of American ladies in the early '50's. The author, Emily Kimbrough, was a popular writer, essayist, civil rights activist and radio personality in the 40's and 50's. Her writing is charming and deliciously funny. The post-war glimpses of European cities and villages is fascinating.

This was such a delightful read. Miss Kimbrough and several of her longtime friends, all of whom were at an interesting" age, decided that since their children are now adults this allowed them the time to travel in Europe. Their trip concludes in London during the time of Queen Elizabeth's Coronation. The people they meet, the places they see and the predicaments which ensue are all described in such depth and detail it almost felt as if I was there with them. My book arrived quickly and in excellent condition. I will definitely purchase books from this vendor without hesitation!
